"AND THE BAND PLAYED."

"Oh, I am so happy," a gushing girl said,
As ale sat on the beach by the summer hotel,
And gave a slight toss to her bonnetiess head,
As her spirits arose with each incoming swell;
"But one thing is wanting to render complete.
The happiness I am cipying to-day,
And that is to hear the grand unusic so sweet.
When the evening creeps on, and we hear the band play."

"And I, too, am happy," responded a wife.

As she sat by her friend in the soft, yielding sand: For its saturing now, and the bustle and life When the men from the city come down wil be grand.

"Oh, yes. I'm so happy, because you see, dear Our life here's expensive as well as so gay, And happy and easy I feel when I hear, That my band—yes, my hus-band—has cor-down to pay."

BOSS TWEED'S BIBLE.

Jake Sharpe, Jamus and Other Rascals Kissed It-so Did Ives, Ward and "Ripper" Frenchy-Murderers and Dainty Dames.

Among other things the late Boss Tweed did in his time was the supplying the civic departments with Bibles He bought a job lot of them at fourteen cents each, and retailed them to the city for $1 each. 'Many of these Bibles have been worn out or lost; quite a few have been stolen, alas, but the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Sessions have retained one at least, of the Tweed Bibles, and use it yet. They are greasy and dilapidated, and the court officers say that their covers have been literally aworn off.

All classes of people have kissed those sacred books, all creeds and men of all nations, from the highly civilized William M. Tweed himself down to the constant. inm M. Aweed nimself down to the con-verted Chang Fo, who desires to swear like the "Melican man." General Grant swore upon it when giving evidence against his late partner, Ferdinand Ward, and "Frenchy" kissed exactly the same book when trying to save his carcass from the vengeful electric bolts. The highborn dame, the filthy burglar,

The highborn dame, the filthy burglar, the millionaire and tramp, the murderer and philanthropist, the European patrician and the Fourth ward tough, all have kissed its covers and called upon God to witness that they were speaking the truth.

"I have sat in my place for many years," said John Sparks, Chief Clerk of the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Sessions, "and seen many different characters kiss that worn old Bible. I have seen an ex-President of the United States take it reverently in his hand and give his testimony as modestly as if he had never commanded a million soldiers on the battlefield.

his hand and give his testimony as a modestly as if he had never commanded a million soldiers on the battlefield. After him came Ferdinand Ward, who had wrecked the old hero's fortune. Ed. Stokes kissed that book, and so did Josie Mansfield before him, neither of them actuated by the aura sacra fames, as in the case of Ward, but by a still stronger passion.

"Oh, yes," he sighed, "the perfumed Fifth avenue belle and the chiffoniere reeking with ash-barrel stenches have succeeded each other in the stand and and pressed their lips on the same spot, for the witness box is truly democratic, and every one handling the book is equal before the law. The scholarly Oakey Hall, the rascally Tweed himself, the elegant Napolean Ives, Reddy the Blacksmith, the voluptuous Mrs. Williams, who testified that her paper was edited from the beyond by such immortals as Cæsar, Pompey, Charlemagne, Wushington, Wellington, Grant and Sheridan; the wretched and muchwronged Pasqualina Robertiella, James Bedell, the collossal forger; Jugire, Wood, Smiller and Slocum lately done to Bedell, the collossal forger; Jugiro, Wood, Smiler and Slocum lately done to death by electricity, each and every of them has kissed the Bible origin, sold to the city by Mr. Tweed. He ens! if that Bible could only spe ens! if that Bible could only speak.
Had it anervous system bowit would have shrunk into itself while Jaenne and his fellow boodlers swore on its covers that they had never received a dollar of Jake Sharp's money. And Jake Sharp swore on it too!"

There are three forms of taking an oath in the court—first, by taking the Bible and kissing it; second, by raising the right hand and affirming; and third, the right hand and affirming; and, third, by affirming without raising the hand, as is the custom with Quakers. Agnostics kiss the book as a matter of form, No one asks them whether they believe in it or not; nobody cares. Orthodox Jews who believe in Rabbi Joseph will only swear on the Old Testament, and the more particular of them insist on kissing that part of it which contains the solemn Hebrew oath which Abraham exacted from Isaac and Isaac from Jacob. The young American-born from Jacob. The young American-born Jews, who are almost universally heterodox, swear like other folks. Every one has read of the Chinese method in which the joss sticks and the slaying of a chicken are important factors, and of the Mohammedan who could not conscientiously swear upon anything but a Koran. Frenchy, though no doubt a pious and true believer, was not so par-ticular.

As no two faces are exactly alike, at least so it is said, so no two people kiss the book in precisely the same manner. There is the resounding cmack of the honest, at all events, the emphatic farmer, and there is the gentle lip touch of the old maid who blushes at being, as it were, caught flirting with the four evangelists; there is the sibalating also of the thief, and the fat kiss of the perjuror. Many who are superstitious, but are, nevertheless, willing to lie, compromise with their conscience by pretending to kiss the book and kiss their thumb only. They think that awfully clever, as if the spirit of the oath was in the, lip touch alone. The sharp opposing lawyer, on discovering the literature of the same of t As no two faces are exactly alike, at onth was in the, lip touch alone. The sharp opposing lawyer, on discovering this little trick, is sure to get the fruth out of such a character.

"Yes, indeed," said Mr. Sparks, allowing his mind to travel over the years, "human nature is a queer thing, and a good deal of it goes on the stand."

Lowell Reminiscences.

One phase of James Russell Lowell's character was a firm belief in the ob-servance of all those minor points of servance of all those minor points of etiquette which go so fartoward polishing the outward aspect of society. In matters of dress he was always rather punctilious, not so much as regarded fashion, however, as propriety. When he was minister to England a freshman from one of the big American universities called upon him with a letter of introduction. Mr. Lowell made it very pleasant for his young visitor, talked charmingly with him, gave him some friendly advice concerning the tour, and several favors in the form of letters which an American minister alone had irienesy active concerning the tour, and several favors in the form of letters which an American minister alone had the power to confer. The undergraduate was profuse in his thanks, and was bowing himself out of the room after his interview—had even got so far as the outer door—when Mr. Lowell caught sight of his hat, which was of the ordinary Derby pattern. He preemptorily called the young man back, and speaking kindly, yet dryly, said: "Mr. S—, no real gentleman in England wears Derby headgear. You should purchase a silk hat at once, and the control of the world Mr. Lowell was, as much so in the ordinary social obligations as in his writings and diplomatic career.

Mr. Lowell was a most absent-minded man. It is related that when he was editor of the Atlantic Monthly not infrequently he would put MS, into his pocket with the intention of reading them ket with the intention of reading them at his leisure, carry them home, and forget all about them. Authors were constantly inquiring about articles which they have requested to be returned if unaccepted, and of which they could get no tidings after repeatedly addressing the editor on the subject. Often the articles would be discovered in an overcoat that had been worn the previous winter, and quite as often they overcoat that had been worn the previous winter, and quite as often they would not be discovered at all.

Mr. Lowell dreaded the interviewer. The writing was once sent to interview the diplomat before he sailed for 'England on the Pavonta. After a prolonged search Mr. Lowell was found in his state room. The reporter stated his errand, received a few brief replies, and as he turned to go Mr. Lowell remarked whimsically: "Is there no place where a man can be safe from the reporters? whimsically: "Is there no a man can be safe from the reporters? I believe that you would follow a man to the other world to obtain an inter-view if such were possible."

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient gritwant of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirite up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostraheadache, the blues, nervous prostra-tion, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits and hysteria. One of the most encouraging signs to the buils was the presence of outside speculators in the street, who have been absent for a long time, and the purchases by commission people for their enstomers were larger than at any previous time this year. Breadstuffs and Provisions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—The fever which was raging all Saurday in the wheat pit was as much as ordinary human constitutions could stand, and, although the fluentations to-day were even wilder, the excitement was no greater than one closting day of last week. The usain news which influences the momentary fluctuations were unheaded: the crowd merely bought or sold according to the impulse communicated by disappearing margins. All the outsomers of commission houses, who had trades open, were called heavily for margins, and nuch of the trade on the first half hour of the esselion was in the way of closing up, as best in esselion was in the way of closing up, as best in esselion was in the way of closing up, as best in the end of the trade on the first half hour of the esselion was in the way hour's transactions can be judged by the range of the price of becomber wheat during that time. There was one simultaneous jump for it at the starting signal as from $100 to $112 for December, and it went higher, and some impetus-spirits change, New York houses selling heavily and Berlin was quoted to lower. The decrime which followed was almost as rapid and accompanied by about as sensational features as was the preceding advance. It timbled like a huge bowder may not the side of a mountain that it struck $1.0%, and after a rebound to $1.0% to perstance apparently equally exhausted, and a long interval of quiet followed the fleres struggie which took place during the first hour. Nobody had defaulted at the clearing house settlement, which removed a load from the overstrained commission men and struck the struck of the sense of t the violence of its fluctuations; like the superior criticle it had its exciting bulge and inglorious collapse.

In rye there was a %c fluctuation in the price of the September future.

Oats, like everything else, was greatly excited at the opening. The market closed alightly above bottom figures.

Hog products were series and higher at the opening, became feverish, reacted and closed 29 able lower than on Saturday.
